

SAN JUAN-RIO GRANDE NATIONAL FORESTS

Weminuche Wilderness Required Registration

In 2014, the San Juan and Rio Grande National Forests will begin requiring recreationists to register prior to entering the Weminuche Wilderness. Registration will consist of a short two-part form (see example below) available online, at agency offices and major trailheads. An individual or group leader will fill out the form, deposit one part into a secure box at the trailhead and keep the other part while in the Wilderness.

There are no fees associated with the program, and it will not impose additional limits on use. Educational contacts and information distribution will be emphasized for the first two to three years of implementation, and then the agency will shift to enforcement, with citations for non-compliance issued.

PURPOSE:

- To help the agency better monitor use trends,
- To gauge the effectiveness of efforts to slow and/or reverse negative impacts,
- To remind visitors of Wilderness regulations.

Monitoring over the past 14 years indicates adverse impacts from recreational activities in some portions of the Weminuche are approaching or exceeding thresholds established by the 1998 San Juan-Rio Grande National Forests Wilderness Management Direction.

Impacts include high campsite densities, denuded vegetation, damage from firewood collection, soil sterilization from illegal campfires, impact to lakeshores and wetlands, degraded water quality from improper disposal of human waste, overcrowding, and less opportunity for solitude, an important Wilderness value.

Required Registration:

- WILL be required for all recreational users entering from any entry point (one registration per party);
- WILL be required for both day use and multi-day camping trips;
- WILL be made available free at trailheads, agency offices and online;
- WILL be the responsibility of Wilderness visitors to acquire, fill out, and carry in a visible manner during their entire trip in the Weminuche;
- WILL be enforced by forest officers spring through fall for the entire Weminuche.

Required Registration:

- WILL NOT change current limits for numbers allowed in a party or length of stay;
- WILL NOT apply to other Wilderness areas;
- WILL NOT impose any fees or other new restrictions;
- WILL NOT apply to emergency services, such as search and rescue operations and wild-land firefighting efforts;
- WILL NOT apply to those with valid grazing permits, mining claims or those accessing private inholdings.

Required registration programs have been shown to improve the agency's ability to monitor use patterns, while better informing visitors on how to reduce their impacts upon natural resources and the experiences of others. Required registration programs are common in other Wilderness areas across the West. In the Rockies, for example, the U.S. Forest Service requires registration for the Maroon Bells, Mount Massive and Cloud Peak Wilderness areas, among others.

The San Juan and Rio Grande National Forests will be accepting public feedback until August 31, 2013 on how to make our implementation of required registration work most effectively for the public and the agency. We welcome ideas on how best to implement specific aspects of the new program, such as:

- What should the registration form look like
- Where/how should it be made available
- Required season of use for registration
- External partners/funding sources
- How to display registration tags
- Education techniques/methods
- Compliance and enforcement strategies
- How to handle commercial outfitters and guides, institutional and scientific research organizations
- How to accommodate frequent users, such as those who make short day trips into the Weminuche on a regular basis
- Other implementation specifics?

Please submit your questions, suggestions, and recommendations to weminuche@fs.fed.us or by regular mail to:
